"HOME ON RANGE"

FOR YOUR FLOCK

During the warm-weather months on the range, the growing flock is expected to develop the strength and stamina that makes sturdy, ready-to-lay pullets. Anything that hampers the flock's development during this period has the effect of hurting egg production during the laying season.

So give your flock the best possible care during the growing season and you will enjoy better egg returns in the laying season next fall and winter.

Generally, birds kept in the open during the summer months are healthier than those that are raised in confinement. However, the disease problem is one which no poultryman can afford to ignore, no matter how much fres. air, freedom of movement, and fresh green forage his birds may be getting.

To escape serious disease losses during the range period, plan now on how you are going to prevent disease or how you can quickly control any outbreak that may develop. Now is the time to decide how you are going to keep your flock in good health — don't wait until it is too late.

As in other stages of your flock's growth, sanitation is still of major importance on the range. Clean the range shelters, feeders, and waterers regularly. Disinfect with a good quality sanitizing agent. And move the shelters and other equipment at frequent intervals so that the birds are on clean ground.

Every poultry-raiser who has rangeland at his disposal should put his flock on this ground. Of course, if the land is not available, growing birds can be raised satisfactorily under confinement. For most parts of this country, the range system seems to be more satisfactory.

NITROGEN UPHOLDS REPUTATION AS YIELD BOOSTER FOR CORN

Nitrogen is upholding its reputation as a yield-boosting plant food for corn on land that two years ago was mostly poverty grass and broomsedge, report researchers at Virginia Experiment Station.

Yields went from 13 bushels per acre where no nitrogen was applied, to 74 bushels where 150 pounds of nitrogen was applied. The corn land previously had received two tons of lime per acre, and 800 pounds of 0-12-12 - the only recorded fertilization on soil that had been abandoned for many years.

The experiment is being revised this year, however, to discover why the corn was of poor quality.

The research, conducted by H. L. Dunton and S. S. Obenshain, is a continuation of a project begun in 1947, when an increase from 16 pounds of nitrogen to 200 pounds of nitrogen per acre resulted in a corresponding increase in corn yields from 32 to 90 bushels per acre. The land, similar to that figuring in the more recent study, had received two tons of lime and 800 pounds of 2-12-12. After the 1947 corn harvest, wheat was planted. No additional fertilizer was applied. Wheat yields on the land where corn had received 16 pounds of nitrogen were only about 12 bushels per acre. Wheat yields following that received 200 pounds of nitrogen were 22 bushels per acre.

Dr. Babcock's Book Now In Braille

Cumberland Boy Honored

Blacksburg, Va., June 23.- Eric Robinson, 15-year-old Cumberland High School Junior, won the FFA Dairy Farming award for accomplishments in vocational agriculture last year, it was announced yesterday at the State convention of the Future Farmers of America held in Blacksburg.

Beginning with one dairy cow his mother gave him three years ago when he enrolled in vocational agriculture, young Robinson now owns five purebred Guernseys outright; a half interest in two more, and is growing into farming. Since his father's death several years ago, Eric has managed his 160-acre home farm with the help of his mother. The five cows plus 10 acres of corn, 8 acres of wheat, 200 hens, one-half acre garden, 2 acres of alfalfa and 2 pigs for pork make up his home projects training program in vocational agriculture for 1948-49.

As a result of his farm training at Cumberland High School under the direction of E. H. Vassar, instructor of vocational agriculture, young Robinson has applied 87 improved practices in his home farm, including the use of certified seed, hybrid seed corn, treated to repel crows; purebred hogs, top dressing small grains, feeding balanced rations, rotation of crops, and the development of permanent pastures. He has installed electric lights in the dairy barn and a new cream separator in the milk house.

Columbia, S. C.- Dr. Havilah Babcock did not write his stories for the blind, but his book is being published in braille. The blind will now be able to obtain for the first time a braille edition devoted exclusively to outdoor stories.

Dr. Babcock, head of the English department at the University of South Carolina, sportsman and writer, has just received a copy of Volume 1 of three braille volumes of his book, "My Health is Better in November."

"I did not write my stories with blind people in mind," Dr. Babcock said, "but I tried to write in such a way that any reader could close his eyes and accompany me on trips through the fields and woods of my adopted state."

"My Health is Better in November" will be distributed to blind people on request by the Library of Congress. It is being embossed by the American Printing House for the blind in Louisville, Ky. The Library of Congress lends both braille and talking records to the blind free.

The book is a collection of 35 hunting and fishing stories from Dr. Babcock's experience.

"It is a compliment to me and I am honored that the editors of the Association for the Blind thought my stories vivid enough to be suitable for publication in braille," Dr. Babcock said. He has waived all royalties from the braille edition.

Archibald Rutledge(of McClellanville, poet laureate of South Carolina and outdoor writer and naturalist, has said he believes Dr. Babcock's book to be "the best American book on hunting and fishing."

"Candy from a Baby," included in the collection, is probably the best known and most widely reprinted of Dr. Babcock's stories.

Another collection of Dr. Babcock's essays is almost completed, and arrangements have been made to have it published soon. He has written more than 150 stories for national magazines.

Win FFA Honors At Blacksburg

Blacksburg, Va., June 21.- One hundred and forty of Virginia's top farm youth were elected to receive the State Farm degree in the Future Farmers of America at the first session of the 23rd annual convention of the Virginia Association at Virginia Tech, Blacksburg, last night. This is the highest honor the state organization confers upon its members in recognition of their accomplishment in vocational agriculture and is limited by constitutional provision to 2 per cent of the state membership. Virginia has 7,356 members.

Those elected from the active F. F. A. membership and their school included:

Lewis G. Harvey, Appomattox; Thomas Moore, Appomattox.

Recreational Program At Playground

July 1st is the deadline for signing up to play in a tennis tournament being planned for the Appomattox playground. Those interested are requested to register with coach Gordon Bragg. Participants may be either girls or boys in three age groups: 15 years and under, 15 to 18 years, and anyone over 18. This will be a singles tournament, with doubles scheduled later.

A change in the summer playground schedule, provides for girls under 15 to share the hours from 9 until 12 noon. If they will come to the playground, softball and other games of interest will be supervised by the director.

Business groups are invited to organize softball teams and report to Coach Bragg after 5 P. M.

Canteen Party Friday Nite

There will be a Canteen Party Friday night at the Appomattox High School cafeteria. This will be first of a summer series. Beginning at eight o'clock, the party will be sponsored by the twelfth grade.

Students and parents are invited to attend.

NO RECLASSIFICATION OF TOBACCO IN 1949

All tobacco growers are advised by the Appomattox County ACA Committee that no provision is made in the 1949 procedure for the reclassification of tobacco acreage after such acreage has been reported and measured as a particular type of tobacco. Therefore, any acreage of tobacco which is measured and recorded shall be charged to the farm acreage allotment for that type of tobacco. If the planted acreage of either fire-cured or flue-cured tobacco for a farm exceeds the allotment the excess acreage cannot be reclassified as air cured tobacco.

It will be the sole responsibility of the farm operator to point out to the reporter at the time that he visits the farm of the type of tobacco planted. Reporters are not authorized to attempt to compute any acreage of tobacco in the field in order to measure and report an acreage of that type equal to the farm acreage allotment and to consider the balance of the planted acreage as a non-quota type.
